Description :

PDF-b16a2 | On July 1, 1916, some eighteen British and French divisions on both sides of the River Somme moved against German General Fritz Von Below's Second Army. By the time the fighting in the region finally ended on November 18, 141 days later, the British and French had pushed the German lines back six miles—at a cost for all sides of more than 1 million soldiers killed or wounded. The Battle of the... Epitaphs of the Great War: The Somme
